Rationale of the Course: This is a lab-based class. The students will have to use the internet lab of the department, alternatively their android devices to develop reading, writing, listening as well as speaking skills. This is course is designed for the students of second semester who have already completed Advanced English in their first semester. In the earlier course, most of the works were theoretical. The students learnt different aspects of vocabulary and grammatical rules for sentence construction. In this course, they are expected these theories in practice in newspaper reports, articles and academic write-ups. They will see how grammar rules are reflected in spoken as well as written English.
